

HOMELESS PERSONS' MEMORIAL DAY

Homeless people die from illnesses that affect everyone, frequently without health care.

Homeless people die from exposure, unprotected from the heat and cold.

Homeless people die from violence,
often in unprovoked hate crimes.

Health care is a human right.

Housing is a human right.

Physical safety is a human right.

Remember our neighbors and friends who have died without homes.

Remember why they died.

National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day December 21, 2009

Homeless people will die in your community this year.
Plan to memorialize them on December 21,
the first day of Winter,
the longest night of the year.

In 2008, over 120 communities participated in the 18th Annual National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day; surpassing last years' number of communities by more than 30. Let's make 2009 a year of more awareness by organizing even more memorial services for the homeless throughout the nation.

NATIONAL HOMELESS PERSONS' MEMORIAL DAY MANUAL 2009

An Overview

Each year since 1990, on or near the first day of winter, which is the longest night of the year, the National Coalition for the Homeless (NCH) has sponsored National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day to bring attention to the tragedy of homelessness and to remember our homeless friends who have paid the ultimate price for our nation's failure to end homelessness. Beginning in 2005, the National Health Care for the Homeless Council and the National Consumer Advisory Board joined NCH as co-sponsors of this meaningful event.

In an effort to maximize the impact of the day, we encourage local and statewide organizations to hold memorials for those who have died homeless in their communities. In 2008, more than 120 cities conducted Memorial Day events on or around December 21 to honor the more than 3200 people who died homeless last year.

What You Can Do

1. Determine how many homeless persons have died during the previous year in your community. There is no official tracking of homeless deaths in most communities, so start now to collect the names of those who die. Work with people who are homeless, service providers, and public officials to compile as complete a list as possible.
2. Organize an event to commemorate this day and raise awareness about homelessness and its severity.

Organizing an Event to Commemorate National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day

Your Event

Invite other organizations to participate in planning the event. Local and State Coalitions for the homeless, Health Care for the Homeless projects, shelters, housing programs, service providers and outreach programs may all wish to participate.

Decide what type of event you will sponsor. Past events have included:

- Candlelight marches
- Silent marches
- Vigils
- Graveside services
- Plays and performances
- Special religious services
- Public policy advocacy

A few of the 2007 Memorial

Day events are described briefly below. Please keep in mind that these are local events tailored to diverse communities. Local organizers are encouraged to think creatively about ways to honor the memory of those who have died in their own community, as together we work for a future devoid of homelessness.

Work with your local health department and/or health care clinic/program to identify the number of people who have died in your community without an address. Try also to obtain people's names and ages.

A name-reading ceremony is a powerful component of Homeless Persons' Memorial Day events. A list of names read in 2007, in cities throughout the country, is available at <http://www.nhchc.org/memorialday.html>.

Please contact Michael Stoops at NCH at (202) 462-4822x234, mstoops@nationalhomeless.org and/or John Lozier at NHCHC at (615) 226-2292x24, jlozier@nhchc.org with the following information:

- What type of event you are planning
- The number of homeless people who have died in your community

NATIONAL HOMELESS PERSONS' MEMORIAL DAY MANUAL 2009

Working with the Media

Media coverage of homelessness usually reaches its peak just as winter begins and during the holidays. National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day offers a great opportunity to work with the media during this time in order to raise awareness of the issue of homelessness. Media coverage is a great tool to emphasize governmental policies, or lack thereof, which can be a part of the problem for those people experiencing homelessness. As governmental policies can also be part of the solution for homelessness, make sure to give credit where credit is due.

Your group should:

Issue a press release (see enclosed samples) announcing your event, giving information on the details and the needs in your community.

Write a letter-to-the-editor of your local newspaper drawing attention to your event and to the issue of homelessness in general.

Invite local media to your event if you feel comfortable doing so.

Working with your Local Government

In order to attract more attention to this year's Memorial Day, work with your local town or city council, the Mayor, the State Legislature, or the Governor. Encourage them to pass a proclamation/resolution that recognizes December 21 as National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day and describes homelessness as a continuing and serious issue that must be resolved (see sample proclamations below).

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

EHC LIFEBUILDERS TO HOLD MEMORIAL FOR 82 MEN AND WOMEN WHO DIED WHILE HOMELESS IN SANTA CLARA COUNTY

Agency notes 26% increase in homeless street deaths compared to the same time last year

SAN JOSE, Calif., December 16, 2008 – EHC LifeBuilders, the largest provider of homeless shelter and services in Santa Clara County, announced today that it will memorialize 82 men and women who died while homeless or in housing for formerly homeless over the past year. For almost a decade, EHC has compiled this list working with local homeless providers and the Santa Clara County Coroner's office. The list includes individuals who died while living on the street or emergency shelter, as well as individuals who died while living in transitional or permanent housing for the formerly homeless. The list from the Coroner's office indicates a 26% increase in the number of street deaths in 2008, compared to the same number of deaths last year (41 in 2007 vs. 55 in 2008).

EHC will host a memorial to honor those who died this Wednesday, December 17th from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Boccardo Reception Center at 2011 Little Orchard Street in San Jose. Over 100 people are expected to attend the event which reflects on the lives of those who died while homeless and celebrates the community's continuing commitment towards creating a society without homelessness. The event will include comments from San Jose Mayor Chuck Reed, Santa Clara County Supervisor Don Gage, and Pastor Cal Cook from Golden Altar Ministries. Retired Santa Clara County Executive Pete Kutras will be honored for his long-time support of homeless services with the Jim McEntee LifeBuilder Award. Eight representatives from local homeless services providers and government entities will read the names of the deceased.

"It is important for us to remember the humanity of those we serve by reflecting on their lives," said Jennifer Loving, CEO of EHC LifeBuilders. "In looking at this year's deaths, it's tragic to note that the ages range from 18-76, that every major ethnicity in our community is represented, and that deaths occurred in all but one city in our County. This demonstrates that no one is exempt from homelessness and that as a community, we must continue to work to end the preventable tragedy of homelessness.”

The event underscores the urgent crisis faced by 18,000 men, women, and children who experience an episode of homelessness in Santa Clara County each year. The event is held in conjunction with National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day which is traditionally held of December 21st – the longest and coldest day of the year.

About EHC LifeBuilders

Oahu community to mourn friends and family who died without shelter

Houseless individuals, social service providers, faith-based organizations and the general public will gather together this Friday, Dec. 19, from 3 to 6:30 p.m. at Kaumakapili Church in Kalihi to remember and honor people who died without shelter in Hawaii this year.

The event marks Oahu's participation in National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day, which has been commemorated annually since 1990 on or near the first day of winter (and the longest night of the year) to bring attention to the tragedy of homelessness across the country. In 2007, more than 100 memorials in cities from Seattle to Detroit to Washington, D.C. were held to remember those who paid the ultimate price for our nation's failure to end homelessness, and to recommit to that vital task.

On Oahu, National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day is coordinated by Street Beat, the newspaper for and by Hawaii's people without housing. In the U.S., the National Coalition for the Homeless (NCH) and the National Health Care for the Homeless Council (NHCHC) are co-sponsors.

Locally, activities will include remarks by friends and family who have lost loved ones to homelessness, free food and entertainment, Christmas presents for the keiki and blankets, towels, clothing and toiletries for all, a candlelight ceremony, and prize drawings for gift certificates and other goodies.

To donate much-needed items or volunteer help, call Sherry Patinio at 946-9324 or Ron Musrasrik at 351-7759, or email sbhawaii@yahoo.com. For more information about the event, call Linda Day at 489-5123.

MVCH staff played guitar and sang songs, and MVCH's Sue Campbell spoke and invited others to speak about each of the 14 homeless people who died. The event ended with "stocking stuffers" created by area churches and groups that included socks, gloves, hats, lip balm, hygiene products, canned foods and other products.

The event was covered in the Cincinnati street newspaper, Street Vibes.

NATIONAL HOMELESS PERSONS' MEMORIAL DAY MANUAL 2009

“Bloggers Unite” on blogspot.com

Last year, blogspot.com launched a project called Bloggers Unite, where bloggers who participate all write about a particular project on the same day.

An event to share stories about National Homeless Memorial Day has been set up for December 21, 2009. The page has already been created, stating the objective to be an event that “raises awareness about the high personal cost of homelessness with vigils in memory of those who have died while homeless.”

This is a great way for local organizers to share their ideas and experiences on a national level. This event provides a forum for organizers, advocates, and homeless or formerly homeless individuals throughout the nation to connect, and raise more awareness for the issue of homelessness and for National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day. Join the event today!

Street Sense, March 18 – March 31, 2009-03-24

Life (and Death) on the Street, Where so Little is Certain

By Mary Otto

At an annual vigil held last Dec. 21 on the cold and windy first night of winter, the names of people who died homeless in the District in 2008 were read aloud.

The name Orin Andrus was among them, although it was spelled on the list as Orin Andres.

The news came as a sad shock to his colleagues at Street Sense, where Andrus had been a vendor before resigning late in the summer. A tall lanky fellow, Andrus was fondly remembered as a “gentle giant” who loved gardening.

Orin and Ken take time to catch up on the past three months.

Street Sense was recently surprised again – this time in a good way – to learn that Andrus is alive and well, despite having been listed as deceased last year.

And the effort to untangle how this happened revealed some important things about the impact of anonymity and rootlessness in the lives – and deaths – of homeless people.

In preparing the story about the Dec. 21 vigil, Street Sense found that details about Andrus' reported death were sketchy. According to an advocate who helped collect names for the memorial list, Andrus was reportedly found dead at 11th and G streets, NW. That had been the very corner where he had sold his papers.

Calls to city agencies for further details, including the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner, went unreturned as the Christmas Eve issue of Street Sense went to press.

And on March 4, Andrus walked into the Street Sense office, hearty and tan.

“I’m not dead,” he announced. He was carrying a shopping bag containing Cuddles, his cherished toy stuffed cat, along with his birth certificate and other documents.

“This is all my stuff to prove I’m alive,” explained Andrus, 46.

A Cause for Celebration

He said that after he left Street Sense he had found well-paying landscaping work out in Arlington, Va., earning enough to rent himself a small room.

NATIONAL HOMELESS PERSONS' MEMORIAL DAY MANUAL 2009

When a friend told him about the Dec. 24 Street Sense article reporting him dead, Andrus laughed. But he decided he needed to come back and set the record straight.

"I think it was a mistake," said Andrus. "I feel pretty good for a dead man."

Andrus' surprise return was a cause for celebration at the newspaper office. But it was also a haunting reminder of the difficulties of keeping track of homeless people, both in life and in death.

Living in Plain View, Anonymously

For homeless people and the people who work with them, it's a complicated matter. Some homeless people don't want to be named or found. Some are estranged from families or ashamed to be homeless, or in flight from justice or from abuse. Many have no identification, because it is so easily lost or stolen.

Street Sense has no formal system of keeping track of vendors and former vendors, who are not employees but independent contractors.

And their lives, like the lives of many other poor and homeless people, are often transient. Many are not reliably reachable by telephone or mail. They do not always contact the newspaper when they move on to a new job, enter a hospital or rehabilitation program, or serve time in jail.

During his March 4 visit, Andrus said he would have liked to let Street Sense know how he was doing but was it difficult while working in Virginia.

"I worked ten hours a day, six days a week. I had a cell phone and it got stolen," he said

Remembering the Deceased

National Homeless Persons' Memorial events such as the local vigil have been held nationwide every year since 1990, to remember the homeless people whose lives and deaths might otherwise go without any public recognition. The observances are co-sponsored by a number of homeless advocacy organizations including the National Coalition for the Homeless.

Vigils are typically observed the evening of December 21, the first night of winter and the longest night of the year. The 2008 D.C. vigil memorialized 52 people believed to have died in the District and Alexandria, Va. during the year, including Andrus. The event was one of nearly 100 held throughout the country.

The names that are read aloud at the D.C. homeless vigil are garnered from a number of nonprofit groups who serve the homeless, and compiled by the National Coalition for the Homeless, which is a sponsor of the event.

Mary Ann Luby of the Washington Legal Clinic for the Homeless, who helps gather names for the memorial event, said she got Andrus' name from an investigator from the D.C. Office of the

NATIONAL HOMELESS PERSONS' MEMORIAL DAY MANUAL 2009

Chief Medical Examiner. Luby said she checked with the investigator again this month and her source insisted that an Orin Andres, spelled with an E not a U, did indeed die.

The investigator did not return calls from Street Sense for this story. But in an interview, another official at the medical examiner's office, who asked not to be named, said she could find no record of Andrus' name, spelled either Andres or Andrus, in the office system.

The official said it would be impossible to confirm the other names on the memorial list due to privacy restrictions.

"There is absolutely no way," the official said.

In high-profile or public cases, the office is allowed to inform the press of the cause and manner of death. In many other cases however, the official said "telling about the death would be an invasion of privacy."

Anonymous – Even in Death

The efforts that go into collecting names for the annual memorial vigils are no substitute for a more formal system of gathering the names of people who have died while homeless, said National Coalition for the Homeless Executive Director Michael Stoops.

"We need a better system of keeping track of people who died homeless," said Stoops. But the task is just one more of the challenges of helping people who live and sometimes die in the shadows.

"When you are a homeless person, your life can be anonymous. Your death can also be anonymous. No one will know if you pass away."

Over the years, Stoops has often been called upon to identify the bodies. It's a difficult task, he said "especially when it's someone you know."

The List Goes On

Names for the 2009 memorial vigil are already being collected. Three days after the 2008 vigil, the body of local homeless man Yoshio Nakada was found in Foggy Bottom, apparently bludgeoned to death as he slept outdoors.

The official from the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner said autopsies are still being completed on Byron Alexander, who was reportedly found dead Feb. 1 at North Capitol Street and Florida Ave., and Ellen Gong, whose body was found Feb. 5 at 14th Street and New York Ave. in Northwest.

A third homeless person, a 50-yearold white male, was found dead on March 9 at 13th and Perry Streets in Northeast, according to Luby. And a fourth, named Robert Pryor, about 52, was found alive on Sixth Street, NW on March 1, she said. But on March 10, he also died.

Alive and Well and Working Hard

On his recent visit to Street Sense, Andrus enjoyed a doughnut with his friends and then decided he had better get back to Virginia. He is anxiously awaiting spring, and more gardening and landscaping work. "I'll probably be planting trees and flowers," he said with a smile. He promised to stay in touch.
